Stores Ambled To You in Good Old Days

Nowadays, patronage storms business. That's how modern shortages are created. Time was when merchants had to go out and find the business. Traveled from town to town; mixed with the townspeople, did a little business and moved on to the next town.

However, this was no fly-by-night enterprise. Trade went on year after year. The traveling merchants covered a regular route, knew their customers well.

Today's picture, submitted by Mrs. Fred A. Clark, 445 Douglas st., is a souvenir of those days. The emporium shown in the picture belonged to the Hathenbruck Co. of Provo. Picture was taken on a stop at Manti.

Could have been in any town en route. Main Hathenbruck store was in Provo. Carried a big stock and sent goods out on the road in this vehicle. Right nice sample case, traveling salesman might say.

Refurbished Saltair Opens '47 Season Memorial Day

Completely refurbished and boasting added attractions over previous years, famed Saltair resort will be ready to open its doors to the public Memorial day; May 30, W. Melbourne Armstrong, general manager, said Monday.

Mr. Armstrong replaces the late Thomas M. Wheeler as general manager.

While some details as yet haven't been ironed out, the fun spot will be in excellent shape to handle anticipated record throngs, said the new manager.

If suitable arrangements can be completed in time, the cafe, closed since 1941, will be open to serve the public. Also pending is music. Mr. Armstrong said there no doubt will be several name bands to spice nightly dancing, but no contracts have been signed to date.

Workmen have been busy since last fall painting, redecorating and working over mechanical equipment, which is in perfect order, said Mr. Armstrong.

The huge dance floor has been refinished and the ball room completely redecorated.

New rides include a $12,000 airplane thriller and several less spectacular rides for the youngsters. The famed giant racer is ready for the screaming hordes that are thrilled by its dips and curves.

Scooters that always attract numerous persons have received a new coat of paint and are in good running order. The fun house has been painted and changed to include more "monkey business."

It is expected that the annual season of pre-season dancing will be underway. While the season officially for the season, bathing in the swimming pool usually con-er permits.
